

I am a flight attendant and I think allowing cellular telephone use inflight is a terrible idea. No one wants to listen to another passenger try to have a conversation inflight. In addition, all the ambient noise on an aircraft precludes anything other than yelling into one's phone. It would be one thing if we still lived in a courteous and considerate society, but unfortunately courteous and considerate behavior seems to be checked with the baggage. In such tight quarters on an airplane it is asking for an increase in air rage.
